Extra Special For Iris Fans

We are not commercial iris growers, but we do some hybridizing in them. Here we have two of the most outstanding iris we have seen in recent years, not of our own breeding, but bred by the late Mr. Luke Norton and grown by us from seedlings. We know that you will not be disappointed in any way with either of them and we think so much of them we wanted to introduce them ourselves even though we specialize in daylilies.

ARLENE WOOD

One of the most beautiful iris in any garden today, a cross of Vision Fugitive X Turquoise Frill (Seedling) by the late Mr. Luke Norton, originator of many iris greats including Sylvia Murray. This iris has everything it takes, fine growing habits, good branching, blooming medium late and blooming over a much longer period than most. Probably the heaviest ruffled iris to date with great substance and the overall flower is large, being twice the size and ruffling of Chantilly. The color is something different, the standards being a beautiful dove orchid and dome tightly closed in a whorl. The falls open an intense lilac orchid, quickly aging to soft orchid center with edging of deeper lilac orchid. The haft is extremely clean and the beard soft lemon. Falls are wide and well balanced. The overall picture of this iris in a clump is exquisite. This iris has been highly commended by many of the best iris judges in the west.

JANE HOFFORD

This great iris is a full sister to Arlene Wood and is identical in every way except in color. The flower opens a full rich cream, aging to soft cream in the standards and the falls to a cream white center edged in lemon which is enhanced by the intense ruffling of the whole flower. Excellent branching, a good producer. It blooms at the same time as Arlene Wood and as stated above, cannot be told from each other except in color. Here again we have the clean haft and a beard of matching lemon.

Both of these great iris are sold with the understanding that if they do not come up to the above descriptions, the buyer may select the amount paid for them in any item from our listing.

The PRICE is only $10.00 each and if both of them are purchased at the same time, the price shall be $17.50 for both of them. Prepaid to your door about July 5th.

Mrs. W. H. Keen, THS Judge of Walla Walla, the Iris City, says: "Arlene Wood is a lovely new creation in the iris world. No other iris in this color range to my knowledge and most all the newer introductions are grown in this valley where we have several iris fanciers and five dealers who vie with each other in growing the finest varieties available. Arlene Wood is a cross of Vision Fugitive and Turquoise Frill, a seedling, larger and more ruffled than most and four local A.I.S. judges who saw it blooming in my garden were thrilled with it and expressed delight that it would soon be placed on the market."

DAYLILY CULTURE

Frankly, this space could be left blank and even the first year amateur could raise fine daylilies.

We receive many requests from our new garden friends, asking for instructions on how to raise daylilies and with the thought in mind that they may be expecting a lengthy discourse, we are embarrassed to give the very few instruction necessary.

The daylily has been called the "lazy man's flower" by many but this is only partially correct. It is true that you may have success in any kind of soil and under most any condition, but, with a little extra care, you may have the very finest in large and colorful bloom.

Any good barnyard manure worked in around your plants in the fall is beneficial but be wary of using a large amount of commercial fertilizers as the daylily does not seem to absorb them as some plants do.

If you live in a zone of hard winters and icy coverings during the dormant period, would suggest that you do your planting in the spring by all means to eliminate winter loss. Allow your plants to form large clumps for beautiful effects, and when you do make divisions, do not plant huge divisions as they seem to sulk when so planted. Keep them well watered when planted until they are well established.

Some varieties do not show their best in bloom for the first year and for this reason should not be closely judged until they are well established.

GARDEN CLUB POOLS

We welcome pooled orders from Garden clubs and in this way a whole club may place their orders together and take advantage of the sensational discounts we offer.

WASHINGTON STATE TAX

Washington State residents, please add 3% sales tax to the amount of your order. No tax outside the State of Washington.

Floralwood Daylilies

NEW INTRODUCTIONS

FROM MRS. BACH

This year we are introducing those wonderful new varieties that you have heard so much about from the hybridizing hand of Mrs. Wm. R. Bach of Bloomington, Ill. Mrs. Bach has made a new departure in daylilies, something different, something that we have been waiting for and we shall introduce her very best as fast as we can propagate them.

ALICE: A wonderful new light cream yellow, a heavily fluted beauty, a large flower opening wide with a light green throat. An outstanding feature is the fact that this plant has about every other bloom double, being perfect in form, having eight or more petals and sepals. Crepe like in texture, heavy in substance and a very lasting bloom. It is medium early and 42 inches in height, not a fast increaser, but makes large robust plants. It is a remontant bloomer here. $10.00

AUGUST CHARM: A salmon pink that will be hard to beat in the class. A large medium bloomer 42 inches tall, giving a clear orange sherbet effect in the clump. The bloom opens out flat and wonderfully recurved in petals and sepals. A small green throat surrounded by a pale yellow eyezone which runs out through each petal and the flush of pink edges both sepals and petals. It is a good increaser and a very healthy large plant. $10.00

LAVENDER LACE: It would be hard to describe this daylily better than the name does. It is a very beautiful soft lacey lavender, a heavy bloomer and a fast grower. It grows 42 inches in height and has ideal habits. It opens many blooms at once and they are large blooms of soft lavender with a creamy throat. It is medium in season and we know that you will like it. $10.00

MYRANDE: Here is the great favorite of all garden visitors, a huge deep maroon or plum in color with a darker center and a golden throat. Petals and sepals are very near the same in width and slightly recurved and opens wide. A very early bloomer that has that deep pile and texture as seen in Oriental rugs. One of the very finest to plant as a highlight among your yellows. The flower will hold up throughout the day under the hottest sun and until late at night. This daylily will rate highly in any symposium. $10.00

PINK SATIN: A lavender pink of great beauty, named after the clear lavender pink found in the iris Pink Satin. The bloom is cup shaped, the petals and sepals curving outward, showing the creamy center which extends through the petal in a line to the end. It is a mid-season bloomer and very prolific and a fast increaser. It is beautiful in a clump and combines wonderfully well with shades as in Alice and also with darker varieties as Myrlande. Plant is very robust and grows 42 inches tall. $10.00

SNOWY EGRET: The great new near white. We have received many inquiries asking if this daylily is really white. There are many shades of red and many shades of all colors and this is true with white. We accept the great gladiolus, Leading Lady, as a white as well as many other flowers of like coloring. In Snowy Egret we have a bloom that opens from a pale cream bud to a pale cream flower. This cream coloring recedes to the throat leaving the upper parts of the petals and sepals a birch bark white. The throat retains the light cream yellow giving a most beautiful effect. The bloom is mid-season on a very husky plant which is slow to increase. Height 42 inches. We have the opinion of several daylily judges that this is the finest they have seen in the new near whites. We regret that one half of the stock of Snowy Egret was discarded in error and the reservations taken for 1953 spring delivery has used up our surplus stock and we shall not be able to make further deliveries until the fall of 1953. In line with our policy of low introductory prices, there shall be no advance in price on this daylily. $10.00

Revolute

Floralwood Introductions

In line with our true convictions, that a daylily must be an improvement to be introduced, we have been very careful in our selection this first year. We feel that we have many that could be introduced but are holding them for further testing. Here we have three daylilies that are great improvements in their classes and we are sure you will be greatly pleased with them.

MISS YAKIMA: Orange Beauty X Valiant, a true golden orange of great beauty and a pure self with the exception of the midrib of white that runs through each petal to the end and on days of high humidity, the petal and sepal edges are trimmed in white. A huge six inch of rounded form and texture of deep satiny smoothness. It is well branched, a medium season remontant bloomer and a good propagator. Height 42 inches. This flower will stand up under sun for all day and late at night and has heavily ruffled edges. $10.00

MANILA: Black Emperor X Royal Ruby. An opalescent deep red velvety beauty with a white midrib running from deep in the throat with a texture like leather. A rounded flower as in Miss Yakima and a bright golden throat, excellent branching, medium propagator. Blooms late in June and flowers over a long period. Height 42 inches. This is one of the most interesting daylilies that we have seen and has been admired by many visitors to our gardens. $10.00

LOS BANOS: From unknown seedling, named after the prison camp where the senior partner was a guest of the Japanese for over three years. Here we have the daylily that we have looked for over a long period of breeding, a new color break, a soft peach self, ruddy peach on opening as found in the blush of a ripe Elberta peach. The color runs the same throughout and the large six inch bloom has a heavy midrib and very heavy texture that stands the heat better than any flower we have seen, matter of fact it holds color through the day and night. The branching is excellent and propagation is all that could be desired. With us this one is remontant and practically an ever bloomer and very prolific. Height 42 inches. $10.00
